Swansea Council recognises that rough sleeping is a problem that needs considerable resources to resolve. However the Council would strongly condemn the use of anti-homeless measures (like metallic spikes or studs) to physically prohibit members of the homeless community from sleeping as inhumane.

Swansea Council would ask the Welsh Government to prohibit their use in open public spaces (as a means of deterring rough sleeping) and instead focus it's considerable resources toward achieving a long term solution to the causes of homelessness in Wales.

Councillors ask officers to work the sentiment of this motion into supplementary planning guidance to ensure new developments do not feature such medieval devices.
